Green Grass of Home...

If you put a handful of fertilizer in one spot on your lawn it will turn brown from an overload of nitrogen. Excess protein in a dog's diet breaks down into nitrogen in their urine resulting in brown spots in your yard.

Fertilizing your yard will make this situation worse. Things which may help are...add water to your dog's food thus diluting their urine, train your dog to urinate in one spot then water your lawn in the area and eliminate lawn fertilizers. If you are planting grass, Bluegrass and Bermuda are most sensitive to the nitrogen, Rye grass and Fescue are more resistant to browning.

We carry 'Dog Rocks' which easily sit in your dog's water bowl. They work by removing nitrogen in the water. Pet Natural's of Vermont, Lawn Aid treats work to dilute urine.
